Year-round Products

Throughout the year, street markets offer a wide variety of products, including vegetables, fruits, processed seafood, and Kochi specialties such as country sushi, Chunichi soba noodles, Aisukurin (low-dairy ice cream), and candied sweet potato chips. You can also find snacks you can enjoy on the go, such as deep-fried sweet potato bites, sweetened and chilled ginger water, and warabi mochi. There are many other non-food items for sale as well, such as medicinal raccoon dog oil, knives and metal crafts, second-hand goods, and plants and flowers.

Deep-fried Sweet Potato

Made with sweet potato tempura flour from a secret recipe, these deep-fried sweet potato bites are best enjoyed piping hot on the spot.

Country sushi

Instead of raw fish, country sushi is topped with ingredients harvested on land such as cucumber, bamboo shoots, shiitake mushrooms, konjac yam, and Japanese ginger. It's seasoned with chopped ginger and yuzu vinegar for a refreshing taste.

Pickles

Take your pick of pickles! In addition to daikon radish, Chinese cabbage, cucumber, and other vegetables pickled over days or months in vinegar, rice bran, and salt, you can also try sweet Shin Jingu pickled radish, which is fermented for over half a year!

Tosa Knives and Blades

Nationally recognized as a traditional Japanese craft, these high-quality blades are individually handcrafted by artisans using the "free forging" technique. Sharpening services and custom-made products are also available.

Antiques

Recently, buying antiques as souvenirs has gained popularity among foreign tourists. You might even find a bargain!

Plants

A wide variety of wild plants and herbs are sold at the Sunday Market. Vendors love to share fun facts about each plant with their customers, and sometimes even offer free delivery.
